

Couscous Sandcastles with Vaughan's Kitchen Cookery School

On Monday 11th May we hosted another popular pre-school taster event, aimed to give young children from the local area and their parents a chance to see our school in action, to meet with one another and to have lots of fun too.

This week we were joined by Catherine Maxwell from Vaughan's Kitchen Cookery School. We practised lots of skills: measuring couscous, chopping vegetables, smelling and identifying herbs, juicing lemons, lots of mixing and of course... plenty of tasting! When all of our hard work was complete, our couscous sandcastles were turned out ready to show to everyone else.

Once again the adults enjoyed the time to chat and get to know one another and the children made new friends, super sandcastles and ate lots of biscuits!

"Really enjoyed the sessions. Both my girls thought it was great fun. Thoroughly appreciate the opportunity to introduce them to 'big school' before they start.

"The sessions have been great, my daughter has really enjoyed it and it's a lovely way to be introduced to all the children and mums who will be going to school in September!

I know my daughter will be a lot more confident starting school knowing some familiar faces."

We had a brilliant time and we're really looking forward to our next event:
